

Driftwood with Accent Glaze

Congratulation on your selection of Koch Cabinetry for your home! This finish is quite different from our standard stain finish. Your satisfaction is important to us and we want you to be fully informed about the characteristics of Driftwood when glaze is applied.

Accent Glazing is a unique finish to cabinetry that adds a beautifully artistic touch. It is hand applied, and wiped off, by skilled craftsmen to add depth and to accentuate the door profile.

When accent glaze is applied to Driftwood stain it may change the variations of the door color, giving it a lower level of the "miliness" look than a door with no accent glaze. The tan colors, in some wood species, may be more prominent in a glazed door versus an unglazed door.

The antique characteristic that is associated with glazing adds darker tones to the profiles and edges of a door. This changes the appearance of doors when compared to doors that have not been glazed.

We expect designers and dealers to show their customers a sample door in the style, finish, and wood species that they are purchasing for their home.

I have read the information above and have shown our customer a Driftwood door with Glazing in the wood species they have chosen. I acknowledge that the color variations that occur when Driftwood stain has been glazed is not considered a warranty issue.
